If I see anyone saying that John clowning on Rey/Kylo shippers - a shipping fanbase that has insulted, harassed, and been dicks about and to John over him portraying Finn - is misogynistic because "dunking on things women love is inherently misogynistic"

I'm going to eat them.

I didn't thread my thoughts on this the way that I did with Lindsey Romain's nonsense and that was a mistake because people clearly need the context that Black people who've been following John for a while and are in the Star Wars fandom already have:

His "laying the pipe" comment (which doesn't even approach what I see from fandom) on Insta isn't actually what "started" this. Years of harassment where people insulted him and dehumanized him over ships with fictional characters is what started this. His Insta comments (feel about them as you want) are being blown out of proportion by Rey/Kylo fans, people in a fandom that literally and actually do reduce Rey to her "holes" and who spent the first part of Dec saying he hated KMT.

A fandom that IS rife with issues.

Not just internalized misogyny, but antiblackness on a scale I've seen from few fandoms before.

This relates back to why I'm not going to put up with shit from this fandom at this time.

Because the Insta comments are being used as cover to hide that they've always hated him

The R/K fandom will say "we appreciate Finn/John the most and that's why we're so shocked and appalled at his Insta comments & how he came for our ship out of nowhere"

A) they make worse comments on the regular (see Sarah Sahim)

B) they've been talking shit about him FOR YEARS

C) Black Finn/John Boyega fans clearly love him the most. That's how that works.

And we see how he's been (mis)treated by that fandom and by the franchise as a whole. We see the comments he gets/they make about himself and Finn.

You don't have to love or even like John's "laying the pipe" comment. I'm not asking you to.

However, ask yourself why folks are rushing to frame him as a misogynist that hates and objectifies poor innocent Daisy/Rey when he's basically barely writing fanfiction
There's antiblackness at play here when I see how folks are rushing to defend Daisy/Rey from John - "he's Daisy's costar, he's objectifying HER" - and I will absolutely pull out my article on how fandom rewrites black men as brutes because this is the second time in a month.

Also I guess I'll link everything under here that I've tweeted and shared once it's not 6:30 am.

[Tweet QT'd]

Also, fun fact friends: This narrative that the majority of Ben Solo/Rey & Kylo fans actually drunk that love and respect Finn and John Boyega juice is a lie. They do not. They have never. And John has hundreds if not THOUSANDS of those fans in his mentions attacking him.

The one "black woman" so hurt and offended by John?

Catfishing using the photo of a black woman in order to dodge criticism of the fandom's endless antiblackness and frame John as being criticized "by his own"
And in an unsurprising turn of events, the “black woman” who called out John earlier turns out to be a catfish. They rly just keep showing their asses at every turn.

I don't understand this targeted racism comment I keep seeing from Anti’s. Not only are Reylos widely diverse, but I have never seen one racist comment. Hell, the whole fandom came together for KMT. Reylo’s are passionate and outspoken, but they are not bullies.

I need someone to actually show me where Lucasfilm/Disney promoted Rey/Kylo as THE romance (couple shoots in character? Interviews from the crew talking about the romance arc that's supposedly present?)

Also where John is making fun of John [Adam] and Daisy's work instead of the fandom.

I'm not crying sexism; no one's being sexist towards me. I'm saying what prompts communist woc to say moc in general are trash is a culture of misogyny, transphobia, internalised racism and homophobia. your opinion of me doesn't make it any less true.
Look at this absolutely uncalled for classism aimed John's way from Rey/Kylo fans on Tumblr a friend sent me. ("John has to be a misogynist because he grew up poor" and "John got FinnPoe canceled because his dad's a preacher" have similarly antiblack energy.)
Rey/Kylo shippers are blowing his comments out of proportion to claim that they didn't hate him before but now they do because he did a misogyny and this flashes me back to what Lindsey Romain did by claiming he was insulting KMT

We already have proof that this is a fandom that is willing to believe and say the absolute worst about John Boyega and frame it as needing to defend women from him (Kelly when they wrongfully said he was calling her weak, Rey from his Finn's wandering pipe I guess)
1st tweet isn't recent but neither is the idea R/K fans have been spreading that John is only speaking out about the films and the fandom because he (wrongly) wishes Finn was the lead.

johnboyega @heyfabric it's not about who she kisses but who eventually lays the pipe. You are a genius.
Abrams had loved Boyega since he saw him in another film that involved naturalistic interactions with extra-terrestrials: Joe Cornish’s Attack the Block, in which Boyega plays a teenager defending a South London housing project from space invaders—E.T. but with an Alien-like alien and Elliott beating the shit out of him with a bat instead of feeding him Reese’s Pieces.
And then Abrams asked him to be “the star of Star Wars.” This is the moment when the actor jumps up and down and gives his new boss a hug. But Abrams just kept talking. He began a lengthy cautionary speech laying out that this role, in addition to positively altering Boyega’s entire career, forever, would occasionally kind of suck, forever. “The job isn’t just to be an actor in a movie when you’re doing something like Star Wars,” Abrams told Boyega, prudently warning him about the dream-slash-nightmare that would unfold over the coming decades. “It’s a significant lifetime commitment to this thing.” Did Boyega understand that this would be a load he would carry for as long as he walked this earth? “Don’t get drunk on the fun of the moment.” Had Abrams mentioned that Boyega would never, ever escape Star Wars? “It could be an enormous burden.”

So even though this IS NOT about jealousy or wishing he was the lead...

Y'all do realize that Rian Johnson redirected the trilogy focus to zero in on Kylo Ren’s man pain which came @ the direct expense of John Boyega’s Finn having LITTLE meaningful character growth/back story?
Я русский тролль
@softboykylo

Finn stans are amazing. They bitched for two years about Finn's supposed stereotypes in TLJ and racism, but the moment you complain about how Poe, a latino, was made into a drug dealer and Rose, an asian woman, was forced to stay behind for tech support, they call you toxic.
Feel how you want about John's comment on Instagram, I can't change that.

But know that Rey/Kylo shippers have been a very loud presence actively trying to tear John down, diminish him as a person, and whatnot.

And they do tie it into his masculinity and his worth as a partner. His comment doesn't exist in a vacuum. Neither does their behavior.

No joke: [a quoted reply by someone that identified as an anti]

A) they're not "weird sexual comments". It's a kinda crude joke.

B) And it'd be great if we could talk about that joke but hey instead, we have to talk about the racism in that (highkey hypocritical) fandom

C) do you think signing you tweet anti r/k will make me care more?

And if you make it this far and are unsure why I brought up John getting backlash for dunking on R/K and not on the pipe laying comment:

Women in fandom have a habit of saying that inherently misogynistic even when it (like John dunking on them) ISN'T [snipped thread where I'd talked about a thread defending Kylo fans from any critical conversations]

We need to reckon with the fact that a significant amount of the people who have been absolutely awful to/about John about his role in Star Wars ARE WOMEN and that those women are weaponizing their womanhood against him/male critics of any kind.

"Saying that critique of fandom is inherently misogynistic" was how that sentence was supposed to go

Again, the idea that backlash is solely about John's "pipe laying" comment on Insta is belied by tweets like the one QT'd in the tweet I'm QTing where the OP uses photos with cast members to say she doesn't feel welcomed bcuz John doesn't like her ship the audacity to attempt to guilt trip a man who has been on the receiving end of the most vile racist shit to be said on the internet, and say he’s not welcoming you to an entire fandom because he doesn’t like your damn ship? y’all are so low twitter.com/watsonholmes/...

White women deciding that John decided to dunk on Rey/Kylo shippers on Twitter to take the heat off of him for his Instagram COMMENT (singular) about Finn "laying the pipe" is just hilarious to me.

R/K shippers have harassed him for almost half a decade. My mans is DONE.

If anyone should receive his ire, its J J Abrams. He's the one that turned him into a janitor. NEVER explored his Force abilities and gave him four line in TROS (Rey Rey Rey Rey). His frustration is valid but fighting with fangirls & trolls online won accomplish anything.
Also, the framing of Rey/Kylo shippers as 14 year old girls as the main shipping demo is interesting to me because

A) their own demo surveys show the fandom skews 20+

B) it's to frame him as attacking innocent (assumed white) teenagers

Like nerd outlets are going to cover this and make it about how John was "attacking" innocent (white) women over a fictional ship and that he only talked about the ship to deflect from criticism when these fans have made his social media and fandom experiences hell for YEARS

I'm so tired of these women and this fandom. Also, Jenny Nicholson retweeted that thread I screenshot and has yet to show any acknowledgement of the antiblackness fueling the reactions to his comment on Insta and his tweets about Rey/Kylo.

As someone I think talks/has talked about toxic fandom, it's... Interesting.

It's just interesting that the same people who rushed to use a (catfishing) Black woman as a voice for Rey/Kylo shippers & people totes disappointed in John would join me in laughing at the idea that I could/do speak for ALL Black people in any fandom.

Did y'all know that every single time I've said something in the vein of "as a black person in this fandom" other Black women like the user in this screenshot have rushed to let me know that my opinions as a Black person in this fandom don't matter. Oh how the turn tables...

Also Jenny Nicholson HAS spoken about the situation with John, leaning heavily towards the "he only did this do deflect criticism for harassment" train and not engaging with the harassment John has gotten for years.

Of course.

(Also it's weird to claim that John "baited" Rey/Kylo shippers to detract from the Insta COMMENT when it literally doesn't make sense considering that he already knows that fandom zeroes in on anything he does that they can blow up into a Big Deal.)
If he was trying to deflect and distract people, he would've dropped tea about the last two films.

"if there was ANY inkling of racism, misogyny, harassment within the reylo fandom that individual was immediately shunned."

A) Sarah Sahim is literally right there being an antiblack fuck??

B) they actually just pretend that the people doing those things are haters 🙄

C) the content they create largely treated Finn poorly when it didn't erase him/his value to the franchise so I wouldn't be bragging about it
Another lie:

Across the big accounts in the fandom like Sarah Sahim and Lindsey Romain who’ve targeted him and insulted Finn in the past few months ALONE, it's clear that they don't like him and never have - especially once it was clear he wasn't a secret shipper.

His money doesn't erase Jenny's White Feminism or negate how a previous White Feminist, Lindsey Romain, blew up other comments he made because she too was a member of this fandom with an obvious vendetta and no interest in using her knowledge noodle.
Also "not everything that's going after him is white so you can stop talking about the antiblackness inherent in how folks are bowing this out of proportion" is always wild to me because... Antiblackness is universal. Hmmm... This smells.

(I know I've tweeted about this before... This sentiment that these fans are innocents being blamed for what ~other fans~ are doing... It's wild and this again... Not true.)
Okay so...

What did I say about this being about protecting white womanhood from a Black dude?

Because uh... Wow.
The guy in the first tweet runs the star wars podcast that's tweeting on the right and he's actually targeting a (Black?) teenager who pointed out his teenage daughter (who made a live stream sobbing about how John hurt her by dunking on the ship) was part of a racist fandom.

B) like they stay using rose as a shield for their fandom's antiblackness and uh... I'm not letting that slide anymore either.
I have been talking about how racist this fandom has been about Finn and John since 2016.

From then, Black fans clocked that a lot of the racism in "female" fandom spaces came from rey/kylo shippers who didn't think Finn should be the lead and trashed him/John constantly.

The only revisionist history here is the actual facts narrative they're spinning about how oh so marginalized they are for what they ship.

This fandom has ALWAYS been racist and Rey/Kylo shippers were NEVER at the forefront of defending Finn or John from ANYONE. I think I talked about this in Nov., but can we talk about how weird it is for folks from a fandom that does in fact treat Rey like a prize to be won by KYLO accusing Finn/Rey fans (who are, primarily Black btw) of reducing her to FINN'S prize.

Because it's weird.

Those of us actually in interracial relationships think it’s pretty gross how many finnreys only ship Rey with Finn to reduce her to a white prize to be won by a black dude to somehow prove equality exists for woke points but go off I guess 🤷‍♀️

(Very spicy language in the screenshot and at the source.

Also, the inbred comment was again apparently made by a walnut just to start shit, not that fandom.) (finndeservesbetter.tumblr.com/post/190004715...)
jenny nicholson made an hour long video reading an x-rated reylo fanfic on her channel as a joke, but john making a sex joke about rey on instagram is “demeaning” and bad for kids because she’s a role model? lol please. it’s not kids or their parents who are throwing a fit in john’s mentions, it’s reylos who are asshurt that he’s a black man asserting his opinion about their ship, clamoring to find anything “problematic” (even going as far as faking tweets like the inbred one) so they can feel less guilty for cancelling him over something his white castmates have also done. jenny has always been bad at hiding her boner for reylo but this just solidified it...whatever i’ve already hit that mf unsubscribe button i’ve had enough of nerdy white girls in 2020 i’m not carrying this energy forward into the new year 😣
(Like she's got 100k+ followers on Twitter and a career as a YouTuber (AFAIK), she has just as much visibility as a minor celebrity or even more considering the reach of some YouTubers and so if the worry is The Children May See This about John's comment... Well.)

This just in folks, according to the weirdos in the screenshot at the QT it's okay to be ableist as hell and be an armchair psychiatrist because an actor... dunked on your ship. Wow.

This fandom remains... a mistake.

[original user has deleted their tweets]

so someone on tumblr is trying to diagnose john boyega with Narcissistic Personality Disorder
One thing about the "Disney set up R/K as a romance and John's just jealous" is like... Did R/K get photoshoots like this?

I don't think so?
"I didn't care too much about Finn, he was always sweaty"

Anxiety, stressing over your continued existence and a case of BEING DROPPED ON A DESERT PLANET IN A STORMTROOPER UNIFORM WILL DO THAT TO YA!

(This was from an earlier QT but like man this fandom is REALLY antiblack.)
This is quality critical content y'all need to get your eyes on! In part, this article unpacks the way white womanhood has been weaponized against John Boyega across the past few days. 10/10 must recommend!

Here's my article over the fandom fuckery following #JohnBoyega as he decided not to take anymore BS from the Star Wars fandom.

https://jolt-studios.com/2020/01/01/john-boyega-the-case-of-no-more-damns-to-give/

Mmmm... But this fandom loved John first and loved him best, eh?

(Love that this unopened box of cavatappi - that's probably referring to the totally debunked "John hates Kelly" shit Lindsey Started - deactivated. Love that for me.)
This is the weirdo that said she knew John Boyega was going to hell (further up thread). She's a woman of color (unsure if Black, don't care if she is though) using her time on the internet to all but call John uppity.

(Also man, can they let Driver live? He's not even here??)

Also the existence of an "anti John Boyega" should
A) disturb you

B) make you distrust anyone that claims this "discourse" is drama started by anti (Rey/Kylo shipper)s or "fandom police"

I'll think about whether I want to drop the obnoxiously long thread that purposefully reduces this to "Finnreys seek ideological purity and are oppressing rey/Kylo fans like the Voltron fandom oppressed everyone"

We'll see

Tomorrow. I thought the problem they had was that John was sexualizing a children's character and reducing Rey to her holes/rewriting her as a sex object??

Or is it only okay when they do it to her over "Ben"?
R/K shippers consistently dehumanizing Finn by solely referring to him via his stormtrooper designation is apparently a thing that fandom does. Wow. Disturbing. The R/K fandom does this thing where they use a fake care for Kelly and Rose as a shitty shield for antiblackness but this person can't even keep the mask up considering how their argument is "John Boyega's fans didn't like Kelly as Rose because she was Asian and not Black" [tweet from OP deleted]
It's ironic that John B*yega's fans are the racist ones who did not like Kelly as Rose since she was an Asian woman and not black. That's why they were okay with Jannah who was less important than Rose and had no purpose in the movie at all, but they still blame Reylos to being racist against John B*yega. 😳 Its really ridiculous. Disgusting. They disgust me. They use their "black racism* card against Reylo all the time. 😳

On the "r/k shippers calling Finn by his stormtrooper designation" thing:*

I remember in 2016/2017 seeing arguments that calling Kylo anything but Ben Solo was disrespectful because it was like misgendering or dead naming someone

And yet... Here we are. (I'm gonna check my archived Tumblr to see if I have a link!)

Didn't find what I was looking for but I did find this response an "anti anti reylo" blog made to one of my posts about the woobification. I wonder how they handled the end of TROS... . (stitcharchive.wordpress.com/2018/04/23/i-h...)
That wouldn't excuse his violent and cruele actions or validate the way he's been woobified into a precious little villain baby by a fandom that has proven it thinks he can literally do no wrong.

shitzantireylosay

JESUS FUCKING CHRIST LMAO CALM DOWN GREG ITS FICTION !!!! irstg y'all pathetically hilarious with your keyboard social justice warrior bull shit and by the way it says it in the recent last shot that Kylo's parents weren't there for him, the droids didn't raise him like you are saying it states that the droids took care care of him by long periods of time while their parents weren't there one of the droids almost murdered the baby while his parents were away, (ITS CANON) heck even Carrie Fisher in her last press for TLJ admits her character and Hans neglected Kylo, but you all like to twist shit to fit y'all's agenda nobody excuses this FICTIONAL character's action the fact that some would like too see this FICTIONAL character's redemption is not excusing shit...

A) that first sentence is a lie
B) they still only have that single comment as proof of "the gross, sexist things he said on Instagram"
C) liking that Chris Brown news is judgment worthy for sure (ick) but that news is from Jan 2019 which means someone held onto that screenshot
Just to make a few things clear...

People aren't upset at John for disliking roylo. He's a human being and he can have whatever views on shipping he sees fit. No one cares about that and if someone does, they should rethink their priorities. People are upset, because of the gross, sexist things he said on Instagram before ever making the roylo tweet. Here's what he said:

heyfabric My boy after realizing Kyle died so he can date Rey.

This is disgusting. Implying that a woman is some sort of a trophy to be won, when you eventually fuck her. A woman doesn't have agency, what matters is who takes her virginity, as if she can be claimed that way. Calling it "just a joke" is also disturbing, because I've heard that excuse from men, trying to avoid consequences for their sexist comments, one too many times.

Overall, his views are troubling, especially paired with how he's liked a post about Chris Brown avoiding jail time for rape in the past.

ChrisBrownOfficial

Just In: Chris Brown has been released without charge in Paris after rape arrest. trib.al/CyTN9ur

This isn't about fictional characters or the suggestion that Finn and Rey will have sex, that's the farthest thing from what matters here. The issue is with how he spoke about women as a whole.

No one's condoning the abuse he received in this fandom or trying to dismiss it, the racism that's directed against him to this day will always be disgusting and unacceptable.

That being said, he messed up. He said demeaning things about women and he should've apologized instead of doubling down. That's why people are mad at him. Not because of roylo, not because he suggested that Rey can have sex with Finn, it's about the real life implications of his comment.
(As in, holding onto receipts in the event that you'll need to take down an actor is... concerning.

He shouldn't have liked that post in the first place and there's no accounting for Black men's devotion to Chris Brown, but receipt keeping on John from a fandom like this? 😐)

Maybe Star Wars needs more respectful fans that don't demand a more "respectful" Black actor playing Finn??

(Also "that's not Ben Solo, that's Kylo" - I'm literally shouting right now.)
that's Kylo Ren, her romance is with Ben Solo, you piece of trash. @jjabrams and @rianjohnson if Finn ever shows up again in Star wars movies or series, please hire a RESPECTFUL black actor for the role. Boyega doesn't deserve it.
Finn is so happy to have his name and reclaim his agency from Phasma and yet R/K fans are... ignoring it. [Original quoted tweet isn't available anymore.]

I only return to Tumblr to make sure I know what's going on with the Star Wars fandom and this response to Jenny N's main comment about why she locked is pretty solid and makes solid points about the Jenny's ongoing performance (catwsbisexual.tumblr.com/post/190018006...)
Jenny, knock off the victim complex. For YEARS you haven’t said SHIT about Finn in your SW content and the most you said about Poe was negative (for no coherent reason, besides the racist writing in TLJ I guess), yet now you’re caping for Finn and Finnpoe (despite hating Poe) out of nowhere, as if to distract from the increasing criticism of your Star Wars opinions.

Your response to this has been godawful. You were corrected about John’s inbred comment yet left your tweet up, mobilizing your reylo fans to use that to further attack him. You KNOW John has defended KMT for years (more than you have) and apologized for his wording when talking about his own struggles to stay strong in the wake of racists fans (many of whom follow you) harassing him for five years straight. And you KNOW you have read published porn about Rey (even if you left out the sex bits to avoid being demonitized), made incest jokes about fucking my little pony, and generally made adult commentary on fucking Disney movies, so don’t try “Rey is a character for children’s movies!!”

The same day you criticized John, you called Rey an incel and Kylo her victim. I thought she was a role model, Jenny? If talking about sex and women in the same sentence is demeaning, you demeaned Rey more than John did by making a joke about a fictional character played by his friend (not just his “coworker”).

Stop being a raging hypocrite, stop baiting Reylo fans and flat out deny Reylo If you truly aren’t one, and introspect on why your response to John talking about his character having sex with his peer using slang set you off so much that you had to blast your white victim complex up to maximum level.

Also, stop lying. You’ve made snide and coded comments about John for WEEKS, including when he did defend TLJ. Support the cast my ass—You loved TLJ which diminished his role the most and didn’t have shit to say about how racist and misogynistic that movie was.

I won’t be rebsubscribing either way but writing a notes app apology is the right path where you can start on fixing the fuckery you have unleashed. Not locking your twitter and crying on tumblr about how twitter has victimized you for defending fucking Reylos. Like?

This was about why you were throwing John under the bus and you made it about how tough your life is. Cry into the money you made revising Dumbo and buck up. Time to make an apology instead of pretending your twitter followers owe you one for calling you out.
In her own awful words, here's Jenny Nicholson calling Rey an incel in response to a comment asking why she called Rey an incel in her TROS review. This is just HOURS before she decided that John making a single joke about Finn and Rey having The Sex was peak disrespect by him.

(Since adults like John can't make jokes about the sex a fictional character is having without it being disrespectful, Jenny shouldn't be making jokes about Rey being an incel - which equates to her NOT having sex. 🚫)

This fandom is spinning John making a single comment about Finn having sex with Rey in the future as him objectifying Daisy.

Meanwhile, this bottle of bootleg olive oil thought that it was OK to "joke" about sending John images of his coworkers' characters in nsfw situations.
This fandom keeps calling characters and people now, they’re talking about John apparently in the screenshot below, incels except for Kylo... Wild.

I was going through their Tumblr earlier and found them calling boyega a misogynist and comparing him to incels for checks notes being nice to daisy and liking reyfinn. completely normal and def not some overt 1920’s racism accusing innocent black men of being predators immediately! Other wise he will just keep getting angry hoping for something more when it’s not going to happen. You hope he will change you hope he will learn to just be comfortable just being you’re friend. I have news for you ladies. It’s not going to happen! So please if you can...Run! Run not walk away from that friendship.

Another turned my entire menu group against me by convincing them that I “lead him on” for attention. Even though I tried to avoid him as much as possible.

Men feeling entitled to your affection (romantic & sexual) is a real phenomenon. That’s how this whole incel community came to be. I remember my friend’s husband saying something really wise to keep in mind... “Most men don’t have women friends. They have women they haven’t fucked yet.” This whole JB meltdown is representative of that mindset. Women aren’t viewed as people, with self-determination and minds of their own. They are objects to be claimed.
A) By virtue of being Rey's friend, not being a fascist leader, and not kidnapping and/or harming her once across the trilogy, of course Finn is a better person than Kylo.

B) Truly the only character people say deserve Rey as a prize is Kylo/Ben

C) Jill's take is... antiblack
Kylo Ren never actually respects Rey's agency, physical space, or emotional well-being. He stalks her through the woods and kidnaps her with the intent to torture her in the first film. When he cannot have her power in the second film, he orders the ship she's on destroyed.

These readings of Finn and Kylo where Kylo is a knight in darkly shining armor and Finn is a monster incel out to escape the friend zone are antiblack They hinge on reading Finn as predatory and incapable of reading signals. Of trying to steal Rey from Kylo.

And then that reading (of Black men as monstrous/predatory) gets passed along to John by these same fans desperate to protect white womanhood from being sullied.
Tw Rape (mention) In case you don't get it, what that person in the above screenshot is apparently trying to imply is that John making a single joke about Finn having sex with Rey in their distant fictional futures is apparently a warning sign about John's behavior.

"Even Finn had more screen time IN TROS than Kylo did" Mmm... (Also how this person makes a point of bringing up how Poe was "about to die" to diminish his importance... Wow.)

Beating up the Funko Pop box of the director that "let Ben Solo die* as part of a YouTube challenge... is not normal. (Wasn't sure whether it fell under threatening violence or not because at this point... I cannot tell y'all how serious these people are about this.)
So according to this R/K fan, it's okay for Elizabeth Banks to clearly sexualize a children's movie (which is what I'm told the issue with John's comments really is 😊)

Fascinating who gets to make these comments... Just fascinating.

"it's never been about rey/Kylo"
Well that sounds like a lie and a half right there... I've also covered how this is incredibly bound up with R/K fans' anger at having someone close to the series snark back, how they say WORSE THINGS, and how this is 100% about their ship.
"woke points" is a term I mainly see used by R/K shippers (did they coin it? Idk) & it's basically used in the same way as ally cookie or in the similar context of virtue signaling.
It, like many of the term fandom uses to dodge critique, is meaningless (stitchmediamix.com/2019/04/15/wha...)

Early today, John Boyega posted a behind the scenes video of him and Daisy Ridley goofing around during filming TROS.

Here are two racist R/K shippers clutching their pearls over their friendship.

(y'all, I can't get over how blatant they are with their antiblackness.)

(Will this thread ever end? No idea. But man, that fandom sure needs to eat a Snickers...)
Wondering why this lying lady sounds familiar? We last saw her in this thread saying that Finn(/Rey) fans were only shipping the ship in the goal of reducing Rey to a white prize for a black man.

Wow.
There are anti accounts on here that insist with their whole chest that the reylo becoming canon in TROs was the most random thing and that reylos won by being racist and mean.

The main point of the ST is reylo & light/dark it represents. If you didn’t realize this it doesn’t mean D/LFL knwotw to reylos it means you suck at interpreting narrative. The kiss seems random bc JJ/Terrio fudged the execution- they were more concerned abt their twincest HC Reylos weren’t racist to John. They were rightfully upset after he made an offcolor joke at reducing the main female character as just a hole for another male character to claim. Then instead of apologizing he tried to deflect by pretending shippers (not just reylos) were toxic.

Those of us actually in interracial relationships think it's pretty gross how many finnreys only ship Rey with Finn to reduce her to a white prize to be won by a black dude to somehow prove equality exists for woke points but go off I guess 😘

"r/k shippers aren't insulting him by saying anything about his race" (lmgtfy.com/?q=What+is+a+r...)

John posted a lighthearted video with screenshots of some tweets sent to him (they @'d or quoted him) that insulted him, misrepresented his comments, relayed false comments/misinformation, and contributed to his stress from fandom.

That is not doxing. (lmgtfy.com/?q=what+is+dox...)

If this person is a person of color (regardless of whether or not they're black), trying to revoke John's "MOC card" because he doesn't like a ship or the fans harassing HIM over it... is wrong.

And if it's a white fan doing it? Oh boy, that's definitely a racist!

For folks who claim to love John Boyega more than anything and for longer, these people sure did craft a characterization for John that is literally nothing like his actual snarky self. He's been snarky and speaking his mind about the fandom's nonsense from day one.

Anyone who’s surprised or even mad that he’s mildly clapping back at a fandom that again HAS BEEN HAVING ITS RACIST DEATH THROES IN HIS MENTIONS AND ACROSS TWITTER FOR ALMOST TWO WEEKS… wasn't paying attention and isn't actually a real fan.

This person is responding to someone sharing my post (on the other account) and they're more concerned with tone policing me over a fandom that has frankly made my fandom experience hell and defending r/k shippers (sure Hazel was "clearly joking"
It's not a "minority of arses". It's hundreds or even thousands of people across the last 4 ish years.

It's the second time in two weeks for John alone.

It is four years of those fans literally shutting down the ability to be even remotely critical about their ship or Kylo. Don't fucking tone police me.

Especially because that Rey/Kylo shipping article (where I link to examples of the nasty things I saw this past week and talk about the toxicity of fandom) isn't even half as unkind as it should've been considering how awful that fandom is.

So this person is like "I didn't see John Boyega put this much effort into calling out the homophobic male nerds" and like when I talk about coded language and shit, I mean this stuff? Where it’s like "oh clearly he doesn't see homophobia as a problem, just women" 😁
I mean, if John Boyega is still not letting go, it’s probably because he understood the mistake he made and his trying to cover it by throwing sand in people’s eyes. He’s been dealing with so much hate and racism prior to this, so the retaliation is literally a form of protection.

I would appreciate him to just admit to the shit he said, honestly. Coming at people who have been supporting a whole franchise just cuz he’s being petty? Dude, this ain’t 2007 and we really don’t need another Twilight situation.

Because when it comes down to it, this is just a person with a lot of influence targeting people for enjoying content. It’s tired, and he’s only doing it to prevent bringing the Pipe situation from spreading.

Additionally, I didn’t see him actively pursue anyone who kept making homophobic comments under his posts due to FinnPoe, nor address the blatant racism that the fandom menace continuously did on his social media accounts. Cause the fandom menace is statistically run by men.

#BenSoloChallenge had some crazy momentum, a fun challenge that saw families and fans from around the world take part.
Even Chewbacca himself Joonas Suatomo took part and helped to raise 75k for charity.
So yeah, I'm bitter another Star Wars actor is undoing all that goodwill.

This is a thread full of people (largely with Adam Driver avatars) hoping that John Boyega’s career tanks, calling him immature, saying that he’s bad for the franchise or for his costars, and generally proving my point that this is about ships... for them. Endlessly blaming ~antis~ (literally anyone even a little critical of the fandom or the ship) and blaming the F@ndom Menace for the racism of R/K shippers across the past 11 days.

Please remind me to make a fandom racism bingo card about all of this because this would be bingo.

Shitty white racist men and boys who cause 90% of horrible drama and bullying attacks against jb and tran (who people mostly ignored lol) as crazed and slobbering antis blame the harmless shipper ppl for fandom’s racism and toxicity just bc they don’t like a fictional couple:

As someone who has lived on the outside of these fandoms for years, seeing how weirdly brainwashed ppl are into bullying ppl (esp women) is so wild. To think you’d rather assume they’re to blame (when so many are poc and lgbt) when white dudes have caused all the problems present

Goth Yoda @hellsocket · 11m

Like there are strikers in every fandom but taking every ism and ist and wishing death and harm onto someone over space wizard shipping is so fucking bizarre that it might as well be hilarious.

Anyways if I see any of my mutuals or friends engage in this I’m abandoning you to the wilds. I’ve seen too many of my friends get attacked and called white or straight and tacked with some awful label over this to respect you for getting toxicity over drama men keep stoking.
Can we zero in on this like... "I've seen too many of my friends get attacked and called white or straight"

Okay but if they are white and/or straight... What's the problem here?

(Also the lack of intersectional awareness with the "drama men keep stoking" bit)

I'm not going to follow police John or make excuses for him following or supporting CB (I bring this up earlier in the thread and jsyk, I hate CB)

I will point out though that Adam Driver worked with Lena Dunham who is... disgusting on multiple levels.

He didn't attack women, and yeah he follows Chris Brown. You bringing up CB shows that you'll do anything to shame John. Meanwhile Adam Driver said he entered the military to kill people in the Middle East but there's no noise. Just say you don't like John and go.
The way multiple RK stans have shown up with that same screenshot of him favoriting CB's tweet like that invalidates their fandom's endless antiblackness is... Wild. The source in question is actually a GQ article (and Ramsey is simplifying things but it's that desire to defend the US from Muslims post 9/11 and viewing participating in war as badass that gets him that label here, I feel) (gq.com/story/adam-dri...)
I'm gonna go on a whole ass rant right now. The source you base this tweet on is another even more questionable tweet and I have never seen a group of people know so little yet have so many opinions. He joined the military when he was eighteen after 9/11 - just found out that Adam Driver is an islamophobe. Today is not a good day.

On September 11, 2001, Driver was almost 18 years old, living in an apartment in the back of his parents' home and "not doing fucking anything," he says. In the swell of patriotism that followed the terrorist attacks, he decided to enlist in the armed forces. "It just seemed like a badass thing to do," he says, "to go and shoot machine guns and serve your country. Coupled with: There's nothing for me here, there's nothing that's keeping me here, there's nothing that's stopping me from going." He was shipped off to Camp Pendleton in California.

Rarely do you hear praise for the brutal initiation of basic training, but Driver loved it: "You see what your body can do and how discipline is effective." He fell comfortably into the structure of the military and into friendships with the people he met there. "It's hard to describe," he says. "You're put in these very heightened circumstances, and you learn a lot about who people are at the core, I think. You end up having this very intimate relationship where you would, like, die for these people."

Full thread of that person's nonsense though:
Supporting him because he is PQ. He was never involved with no his fandom and justifying whit he did and is still going on because he was brought with racism only hunting natural people who are with @cult in their everyday lives. And before you start accepting this.

It is wild to see folks in fandoms that pride themselves on being able to read the sacred inner meanings of a text (see the throne room meta) absolutely fail at reading comprehension when it comes to a tweet.

Jameela, do you know what Fandom Menace is? Know those people chased Kelly Marie Tran away from social media by harassing her? That JB called her weak and is now being adored by the same fandom for being sexist and attacking a mostly female fandom named Reylo? Its not about racism.

6:15 PM · 11 Jan 20 · Twitter for Android
I genuinely think that Jameela is absolutely performative in her wokeness but like... She's actually not here.

Because folks in fandom don't talk about whiteness as an identity (h/t Dr. Rukmini Pande's Squee from the Margins), white focused and dominated fandoms like the R/K fandom like to think they're above race and identify politics when they're wallowing in it.
Go through this thread and play close attention to the people weaponizing a desire to protect poor, innocent, WHITE Daisy from John. Because this is a fandom norm we've seen increase over the past 2 weeks.

Whiteness is an identity. They're weaponizing it.

Reductive ass "antis say shipping Ben with Rey instead of Finn is actually racist" claims continue to grind my gears. Because that purposefully misrepresents how those conversations go done and why they sound "like that" (but they don't)
You can dislike #Reylo as a ship but what #johnboyega is doing is wrong and bullying and inciting his fanbase against people. He's making it okay for people who have harassed the #Reylo fandom for years to feel validated in what they do.

I know that #johnboyega has received racist harassment from #starwars fans over the years (and that's completely not okay) but to say or imply that is solely the fault of #Reylo fans is false.

This narrative that the entire #Reylo fandom is toxic and racist has been perpetuated by people who don't like our ship and think that us shipping Rey with Ben instead of Finn is racist.

Are there bad people claiming to be #Reylo fans and harassing people? I'm sure. There are people like that in every fandom but to act like that's what all #Reylo fans are like isn't fair. Would it be fair to say all #starwars fans are horrible because some are?

And before someone says well do something about those people the entire #reylo fandom isn't responsible for babysitting and making sure everyone who claims to ship the same as us isn't being a prick.

Even if we did somehow stop the bad ones it wouldn't matter because a majority of #starwars fans decided a long time ago it wasn't okay to ship #reylo and anyone who did was scum so they continue to perpetuate this narrative that everything we do is wrong and toxic and hateful.

When we're just a community who find something positive in two people coming together in love.
The main reason why you may see someone say a ship is racist? Because the fandom hinges on being racist towards a Black character and we're just too damn tired to spell out the ins and outs of what we go through

[Quoted Tweets]

Like after the fiftieth time of having to explain to yet another non-Black person why the Rey/Kylo or Barry/Caitlin or Kara/Anyone White fandom why the fixation on white characters that came along with racist-ly dunking on a Black character, it becomes easier to just say...

"Those ships are racist." Because at the point where Black fans are seeing fans of that ship write essays about how Finn is a misogynist monster, Iris West is a bitch who needs to die, and all the Black people in Kara's life exist to serve her platonically of anything...

What else do we call these ships? Because tweets are only so long y'all and again, it's NOT like the people doing this care what we're saying and would pay attention if we were nicer in the face of folks in fandom constantly dehumanizing and dismissing Black characters...

I did a thread about how the way R/K fans on display across this thread will deny that they're racist and that their fandom is racist have tones in common with Meghan haters... Like. Anti-blackness.

This trash article about Meghan and Harry is actually super relevant to what's been going on with @JohnBoyega, the Rey/Kylo fandom, and coded racism from people in fandom/media that think we can't see what they're doing.
The Queen summons Prince Harry to crisis summit at Sandringham with William and Charles

The monarch will meet Prince Harry, Prince Charles and Prince William to sort out the next stage of the Duke of Sussex's proposals to quit the royal family with his wife Meghan

Meghan and Harry have announced their intention to resign from their royal roles immediately so they could pursue a life earning millions of pounds.

It has emerged that Harry and Meghan told Elton John they wanted to quit before telling the Queen.
At no point in this article does the writer mention Megan’s actual race or mention her Blackness.

But that doesn't mean that it's not racist? Look at the second screenshot and how it continues the condescending attitude towards her.

Which is tied up in antiblackness. A lot of people dismiss the racism aimed at Meghan because it's not overt (to nonblack people). It's things like saying her avocado toast supports war crimes or scolding her for holding her baby bump or sharing lies about her personality and friendships.

But it's still racist. Just like what's happening to John from THOUSANDS OF REY/KYLO SHIPPERS ACROSS THE PAST 2 WEEKS.

It's not overt (to nonblack people), but the antiblackness is NOT subtle and it is not ending. So far, I haven't seen a single Rey/Kylo shipper call John or Finn a racial slur or insult his Blackness. That's why they think the past 11 days haven't been racist af from them.

But what I have seen

- saying John is a potential predator to Daisy and a bad friend
- saying he's jealous of Adam Driver career wise or romantically
- implications that he's either abusive or an abuse apologist
- Sarah Sahim's comment about his genitals
- at 100s of people trying to get him fired

- one instance of "Finnkong " from a potential troll account
- regurgitating the same comments about John being a misogynist because of his "who lays the pipe" comment and Lindsey Romain's purposeful misinformation of his comments to say they were about Kelly Marie Tran

But again, I haven't seen racial slurs yet. Or lynching photoshops. Or people saying "I hate John Boyega because he's black" with their chests.

But just because that's not how this fandom works in this moment or that I haven't seen it, that doesn't mean R/K fandom isn't racist?

"When did the narrative that "Reylos are racist and hate John" come into place??"

Uh... pretty much the moment folks in fandom realized that Kylo was the last Skywalker and Finn was our male lead who's close with Rey. If you'd been in fandom since 2015/16,... You'd know that.
"John's video didn't even have racist tweets in it."

A) again this is what happens when folks decide that the only real racism in fandom is overt, inescapable, and involves slurs

B) one of the tweets was from a catfish pretending to be a black women to shame him... 😒

john boyega exclusively attacked reylo shippers that called him out for a low key misogynistic joke but for some reason all of twitter is convinced that it was cause they were being racist? idk anyways i’m done his vid didn’t even have racist tweets in it bye
Like I'd say that there's something sketch (racist) about pretending to be a black woman so your condescending critique of a black actor goes over well and is more effective.

Also, again, they spend hours harassing him on new years eve. Hours. Talk about that, ya weirdo. One of the things that R/K shippers keep doing is framing themselves as people who mind their business and can't possibly be racist to John or about Finn because they're so busy writing sweet fic where Love Wins.

But a lot of their content looks like this

"I dislike Finn because he's indecisive and lies to Rey about being resistance. The guy who actualfax tortured Rey and kidnapped her is better than Finn because at least he didn't lie about being garbage. Also I'm not racist, John Boyega is lovely."
#WhatFandomRacismLooksLike

Okay I'm back and I'm sober and I'm ready to answer comments. XD I dislike Finn primarily because he's very indecisive. He can't seem to pick a cause and stick with it. Plus, he lied to Rey from the beginning- whereas Kylo has never lied to Rey about who he is. Therefore it makes me upset that people still think he's the clear choice for her affection. I'd dislike him no matter what color he is, because I love John Boyega irl also. He's an adorable human! I love you guys, and I would never want to upset anyone.

But Rey/Kylo shippers AREN'T being blamed for the racism that's been present in the Star Wars fandom for generations. We're not saying that they were mean to Samuel Jackson or whatever.

We're pointing out the racism they're participating in NOW and have been since 2015/16.
Replies were announced. "Some people started a campaign against John Boyega to boycott the movie because his character, Finn, has a major role in the sequel trilogy. They were racist towards him and harassed him even before the movie was out. The attacks didn't stop after the first movie of the sequel trilogy came out, in fact, it reached its peak with the release of the last film. Almost everyone recalls the infamous female-dated version being spread online. The fans continued to harass, a group of people who called themselves "The Fandom Menace" turned their outrage mainly against Kelly Marie Tran. Also, Daisy Ridley, Kathleen Kennedy and again John Boyega after the release of The Last Jedi and started a movement called "No More Force Diversity" targeting the women and POC of the Star Wars specifically."

While generalization is often not accurate and misleading, it is fairly safe to presume that the older demographic of the fandom are the ones against diversity in the new Star Wars films, while the younger ones are championing it. After the backlash from The Last Jedi, Disney was left scrambling trying to please a fandom instead of focusing on producing a quality body of work. The fans took notice of the absence of Kelly Marie Tran's name from the marketing of the Rise of Skywalker, and the reason was pretty clear when it premiered. Her character, Rose, was basically erased from existence due to the constant racist harassment the actress received on social media, which lead to her deleting her accounts on those platforms. A group of fans, more specifically "Reylo", who describe themselves as a "diverse community of POC, women, LGBT, disabled, Jewish and Muslim people among others, who dealt with harassment in real life or online before" made a collection of fan art, cosplay pictures and fan letters into a scrapbook and gave it to Kelly Marie Tran.

With the release of The Rise of Skywalker, we got to see the fans fighting back. The movements started with the Fundraiser for Adam Driver's charity, that reached $7k and counting, to the "Saving What We Love" fundraiser inspired by Kelly Marie Tran. The latter raised over $4k in a span of only hours and it is aimed towards "Cybersmile Foundation," an international non-profit providing support for victims of cyberbullying and online hate campaigns. Twitter user @megscream, who started "Saving What We Love" explains her goal for the fundraiser: "We hope that people will join us in helping to create a safer online space across all social platforms for everyone to enjoy and at the same time we're raising funds for an organization that works every day to achieve exactly the same goal. It might seem like an impossible dream and we know it won't happen in the span of a few days and because of a single campaign, but if Star Wars has taught us something, that is that we can be the spark that will light the fire."
John isn't calling out The F@ndom Menace right now because they're not the people in his mentions, indirects, and across social media misusing social justice language, twisting his words and calling him a misogynist, and trying to get him blacklisted SINCE DECEMBER.

Using the dictionary definition of racism - a definition that doesn't actually encompass the nuances of racism in offline life, much less how it works in fandom - to try and say that WE POC are weaponizing it... That's a whole ass choice to make right there.
Calling somebody out on their controversial actions, statements or comments they've deliberately made doesn't equal racism or internalized racism.

The term has been weaponised & stretched so much in fandom spaces that it has begun to lose its darn meaning when it's randomly being thrown for statement validation. Calling someone racist constantly w/o a reason & on purpose can be hurtful & harmful.

racism

prejudice, discrimination, or antagonism directed against someone of a different race based on the belief that one's own race is superior.

They created rich and meaningful content throughout these years and they're very passionate about it.

The fact is that Finn's characters was wasted doesn't allow John to mock his fans (the first tweet he made) for what they love about the saga (+)

4:11 AM · 12 Jan 20 · Twitter for Android
And if your fandom is a welcome space for racists to write racist fanworks... Well.

Also, a lot of R/K fans have made it clear that they're not John's fans. So he's not mocking his fans. He's mocking people who've been trying to harass him. "I think hurting his career would be the best way to teach him a lesson-he's such an egomaniac, a film bombing would crush him."

These are not signs of a healthy fandom. These are not signs of an anti racist fandom.

We need to talk about this more??

I really do think that R/K shippers like this don't understand that John was a huge draw for Black audience worldwide and that many of us new him from his past work and popped into Star Wars across the trilogy because he was there. He has plenty of fans.

"bad Fath jiu-jitsu to try and pin years of racist abuse on them is so unfair"

We're actually talking about how rey/Kylo fans are actively weaponizing fragile white womanhood to the point where their swarming and shitting on John across the past 2 weeks is seen as reasonable
But him dunking on their ship and making a video where you only see the usernames of the users and their tweets is if you focus at it is... the worst.

And again, this is a flat out lie that Rey Kylo fans have EVER been big Finn fans who defended him.

Also, "bad faith" 😊

It's fascinating that the R/K shippers slandering John, swarming his mentions, publicly trying to figure out how to destroy his life and career in the future and the like aren't being seen as antis but primarily Black people going "good for you, John" about this... are.
tbh the shit reylos got from the greater sw fandom and bluechecks kinda scares me. the way shipping discourse so easily synthesizes with online culture war bullshit is really disconcerting, but then again i guess shipping is inherently tribal in nature, like most online cliques.

twitter.com/lsirtkim

but i do worry that this whole “reylos are racist” anti attitude could then leak into other fandoms, and targeting people who like one set of pixels on a screen over another set of pixels on a screen is just going to lead to an even less enjoyable fandom experience the people in 2006 had the right idea, just ship and let ship, guys. we’re all just losers yearning for a fulfilling relationship, so we take to watching fictional characters make out for solace

Also, I just blocked this person (who QT’d the person in the previous screenshot two tweets up) but before just now they could’ve gone through my thread with dozens of examples of the fandom’s racism.

This isn't like the "typical" anti/anti anti bullshit you see in fandom and if you try to come at it like it is, you're going to be wrong and you are gonna look goofy as fuck ignoring that this is about patterns of antiblackness and harassment. Part of why I'm not letting this go is because of the way the shippers are rewriting fannish history and weaponizing their (largely white womanhood) as they blow John's past 11 days out of proportion.

Like she's saying that she thinks John cut Kelly out of a photo (because he doesn't like women) and ignoring that John literally clarified that his comments were about himself, not Kelly, to make him look like a misogynist.

Also she retweeted a "John liked CB's post" tweet

A LOT of Rey/Kylo fans are like Selene, willing to create and share lies and carefully crafted tales of how shocked, offended, and sad they are about John "turning on them" and since the majority of people on other platforms don't know the gig, they risk believing the trash. If I stop talking about this, if we stop talking about this fandom where people are openly plotting on how to destroy John's career and life over the fact that he doesn't like a ship and snarked about the shippers on his ass about it -

The easiest way to tell if the person losing it over John Boyega is full of shit is what reasons they claim for being mad. If they bring up him supposedly calling Kelly weak, him following Chris Brown, or betraying R/K shippers - the main people defending him from racism? Block.

Earlier in this thread I mentioned a truly racist beauty and the beast AU celebrated by parts of the R/K fandom that never appeared to get called out. Here's detailed information about that story from someone who dug deep because like... It's a lot. (captainamericagf.tumblr.com/post/177695525...)
"colored people"

"blacks"

I... literally can't even with this fandom. Like even of English isn't your first language, is there no sense of how dehumanizing any of this is?? Really??

(Also, I love that they did this racist ish while saying to report people talking about racism)

Reylos, when Antis call you racist even if you’ve never said a thing about colored people, don’t shrug as if it’s something to laugh at. You’ve to report them if they harass you. They’re going too far. If no one is willing to stand up for us, we need to do it all by ourselves.

I wasn’t referring only to Blacks—that’s why I used that word. I was speaking in general. But I really didn’t know it was perceived as an insult. Its Italian translation is not felt like that. You can’t imagine how much I’m mortified. Sorry again.

I just posted a picture of a shipper - not a troll - calling people of color "colored people" & dehumanizing Black people via "blacks". I've detailed almost 2 weeks straight of endless antiblackness.

But tell me again how R/K shippers are the most progressive part of the fandom
Every day thousands of people, tens of thousands of people, sometimes potentially hundreds of thousands of people on the internet gather to attack a singular group of women. Every day for weeks it’s been happening. How does that not sound like misogyny to some of you??

It's not fandom's job to fix societal racism, but asking for fandom to stop perpetuating racism - like again, they've been up John's ass for almost two weeks straight and refuse to admit the onslaught has antiblack origins - shouldn't be asking too much of folks.

I do think it's fandom's job to fix issues with racism in fandom. Like that's pretty clear to me.

Who the hell else is going to if not the people in these fandom spaces? They... They can't be serious, right? This is a joke right? (It's not.)

Using an MLK quote to support an antihblack fandom... AND THEN GETTING THE MAN'S DAMN NAME WRONG EVEN THOUGH IT'S SPELLED OUT IN THE GRAPHIC...

I'm so tired, y'all.

"Martinez Luther King Jr..."

My God.
Okay...

I don't want to be the one pointing this out but there just seems like no other way around it.

Look, arguing with John is like playing chess with a chicken; no matter how good you are at chess that chicken is just going to knock over the pieces, crap on the board and strut around like it's victorious anyway. Just focus on positive things & IGNORE his cheap-publicity antics.

The more we engage with him the more fired up he gets. Coz that is EXACTLY his Main Goal. He wants ALL the FOCUS to be on him. That's how some celebs (not all but some) get themselves trending. And the Media will eat it up like shit like they always do. Regardless of the content. Its how these things work. Sad, but that's the reality of it.
Also, he knows he's got a bunch of followers, and they will go attack us if he so much says/gives the word. No matter how angry we are, the trick is TO NOT PLAY INTO HIS GAME. If we give in, it just fuels him more. One thing people with a big ego hate is being totally IGNORED. Do that instead.

But on a more logical note, we can channel all this negative energy that we received from this shitshow and turn them into something positive.
I know things are hard right now, and it’s not gonna be easy soon. But so long as we hold onto our beliefs, love and each other, goodness will prevail.

Remember. Like Martinez Luther King Jr. said:

We’re the spark that will shine the light into this darkness.

This is apparently a thing this fandom does - using an MLK quote for their ship, not misspelling MLK’s name.

Wow!
Also like yesterday, I mentioned how weird it is that the anti anti/anti fandom police people I've seen talk about this are rallying behind the shippers claiming they're trying to punish John for his "who lays the pipe" joke and like... Can we talk about something right quick?

Can we talk about how the shippers going after John and plotting his downfall and acting like he's a villain would be deemed "antis" if they weren't going after a Black man?

Because the shit here is the anti behavior they claim to hate and yet... They aren't shutting it down. In fact, I've seen multiple people ignoring that this is the culmination of YEARS of nonsense from this fandom shitting on John and Finn in public to be like "well (white) women are in danger so like... we must protect them from John and his mean fans"

This fandom is so racist.

I mean, deeply and shamelessly antiblack. Like these are the fans I'm told are the most progressive star wars fans? The folks who talk about John like this and accuse him/his fans of playing the race card.

Okay.
I do NOT expect John Boyega to ever see or acknowledge any of this thread. That's not what I or any of my fellow fans are talking about this. We're not doing this for him to give us attention. We're doing this because we see what's happening to him and need to document it.

The Fandom Menace is such a handy scapegoat that R/K shippers keep using to say that their fandom isn't racist at all but like... we're two weeks in to Rey/Kylo shippers talking about John like he's a monster out to harm them specifically (the only women in fandom apparently)

I’m not saying John didn’t experience any racism, which he clearly did and it’s disgusting, but it’s mostly because of the fandom menace. Kelly experienced a fuck ton of backlash from those assholes too.

No one is talking about TFM right now because that subfandom isn't the one currently exhibiting endless antiblackness about John and pretending they're victims when called out.

It's straight up R/K shippers - and duh, not all of them, but how many are calling this shit out? Hm? This shit... This is from ago. I've had this up on my kindle for days.

This is an example of more of the same white women who ship Rey/Kylo acting like John (and his fans, now) are systemically are oppressing them. (skywailer.tumblr.com/post/190038954...)
I posted this on Facebook in an attempt to get a general audience to see what goes on thanks to social media hive minds, and I'll put it here too:

Social media is the new gathering place for the mob mentality. Sometimes the mob is right; sometimes it's wrong. Most of the time, it doesn't matter because it gets extreme and ugly very fast. Worse still is when people in a position of power (be it political or because they have a significant, large, or higher and easily seen social platform) intentionally grab the attention of the mob in order to steer hatred and harassment towards people who do not have the same platform or social support.

Over the past few days, I've seen a grown man, a celebrity, John Boyega, from Star Wars steer a conversation and focus towards people and a community who did not agree with a ill-mannered joke he made about a female character. "It's not about who she kisses, it's about who eventually lays the pipe." That was the beginning of the conversation, on Instagram, and people on social media took to commenting on either: how hilarious that was, how stupid/silly women were being for finding it offensive, or stating (either calmly or with curse words) about how it was a sexist/uncomfortable/misogynistic joke. John Boyega then decided it was in his best interest to take to Twitter with memes badmouthing/shaming a community's interest in a Star Wars relationship (Rey and Ben/Kylo Ren). He also took to name-calling anyone who did not agree with him. Idiotic was a favorite term of his.
This person wanted to end the drama and focus on putting positivity into the mix but like their main audience and who they're actively seeking examples of harassment from in a follow up reblog are... marginalized shippers who haven't been treated well by people who hate the ship (check out OP's John Boyega tag to see how 3 posts down they say that jokes like John's single joke do things like make rapists comfortable with assault - linking John with a story about a predator they knew.

Calling his joke predatory.

My God.)
That that "reasonable sounding shipper absolutely leans in hard on the image of fragile white womanhood in order to be like "this is bigger than John, it's about ALL PREDATORY MEN THAT FEEL EMPOWERED TO POSESS WOMEN" makes me sick to my stomach.

I genuinely hate this fandom. (That "I'm here to help document harassment and ease the pain" shipper was mmm... Not a honeypot, but I can't remember the word.

But uh... "fake as hell and out to portray the in group fandom as oppressed by John Boyega" should about cover it

How are they allowed to be biased?)

This PickMe POC has decided to pretend John clarifying that his comments about weakness were directed at himself and not Kelly Marie Tran didn't happen because they're a petty piece of shit! Wow!

This is for real why I don't listen to PickMes about anything.

Lol I can't stand John Boyega. He's out here all offended because some girls on the internet were annoyed by his stupid comments but at the same time he called the homegirl Kelly Marie Tran weak for hopping off twitter after being endlessly harassed by racist idiots.

Make that make sense...
"Spare me on who the real racists on this godforsaken fandom are"

Hahaha

Have I landed in the Mirrorverse by accident because this surely has to be a joke. Not the "shippers of color were called slurs" because of course I'm in another fandom where that happens constantly but -
The real racists in this are the white people?? Who are being racist??

And let's be real: right now it's white women in the R/K fandom who are only moments away from coining the term "reverse misogynoir" in their quest to claim that they are the most oppressed women in fandom. The person with the gray icon would be assumed as being with The F@ndom Menace.
Amara, the person spreading a lie that John was doing cocaine while filming TROS, is... not.

I don't know that they're even a troll. I don't want to look.

What they both are, is racist as hell.

The @ShitReylosSay blog has hundreds of screenshots. It is possible to go through the recent ones that are clearly tweets and fact check the ones that are racist to make sure they're real and relevant.

This person, who I just blocked, could've have gone through my thread.
antis be saying shit with like 3 screenshots worth of evidence and this woman made GRAPHS and HAD LITERAL PROOF AND ACTUAL RESEARCH. 400 SCREENSHOTS. she exposed some of you assholes with absolutely no insults whatsoever and you call her hateful? you’re embarrassing. twitter.com/informalmajest...

good for her for pointing out that the racism actually comes from alt-right men in the fandom menace. she had legitimate proof and everything. 11:36 PM · 15 Jan 20 · Twitter for iPhone the fandom menace making videos about reylos is literally just an excuse to bitch and moan about women who like star wars. and antis fully agreed with them as if they weren't the ACTUAL people who racially harassed kelly and john.

But yeah, this Totally Unbiased Data Analyst has graphs and shit so she’s proven that the real racists in fandom are... who exactly?

(This is very much like Kylo hallucinating himself into a redemption arc, only it’s white women convincing themselves they’re not antiblack af.)

A) anti fandom was coined by Jonathan Gray (i believe) well over a decade ago
B) people critical of fandom were told to use anti [character/ship] tag on Tumblr so people could avoid seeing criticism
C) while some people choose to be identified as antis... not all do

They proudly coined themselves. No, you can’t get away from the anti platform being saturated in hate. Work to make it better.

D) Black fans talking about antiblackness in fandom are called antis no matter how we talk about it. This started in the teen wolf fandom, I think

E) what is the "anti platform"

It will never stop bothering me that people are acting like John's "Lay the pipes" comment is the worst thing to ever exist and and will use him lightly snarking fans to say that he deserves the antiblackness he's been getting.
This is me. The racism directed at Boyega due to Reylos is incredible.

Read the article. The response from Reylos directed at John were entirely due to an absolutely disgusting and misogynistic comment. And he CHOSE to double down on it and attack fans.

Replies to @myanrueller28

So the racism against him is appropriate because he said a mean comment. Got it. This is beyond simply the Fandom menace at this point.

Is it surprising that Jenny Nicholson is sharing this article and hyping it up?

("It's nice to see an intensely researched account of just how bonkers it is" hahaha I literally CANNOT.)

Writing fanfiction about a Twitter account dunking on your ship by sharing... the things shippers tweet not just about their ship but about other characters, performers, and fans is all well and normal, yes?

(It's not.)
Is anyone actually saying that no other shipping focused fandom populated by white women is incredibly antiblack?

Because what I've seen are folks pointing out that this IS JUST LIKE OTHER FANDOMS where white women who like a thing go wild when their love is mocked or challenged.
Somebody I didn't block until just now (apparently, according to tweetdeck) saying that "antis" receipts are weak or fake

(Again, I've been documenting this ish for WEEKS with traceable receipts.)
They ARE CHOOSING to ignore what we're showing them.
